STREET IN CITY CENTER TO BE RENAMED FOR LOCAL BLACK PIONEER FARMERS

MILLCREEK. Samuel and Amanda Chambers were one of a handful of Black families that settled in the Millcreek area during the 1800s. Most ended up moving north to Idaho or south to Ft. Union. Not the Chambers -- they kept cultivating Millcreek soil until they had a prosperous farm of 30 acres. When Samuel died in 1929 at the age of 98, four years after his beloved Amanda, he had lived in the area more than fifty years. Both are buried in the Elysian Burial Gardens in Millcreek (1075 E 4580 S).

One of the streets in Millcreek's City Center doesn't have a "real" name: 3205 South sticks out among Elgin Avenue, Villa Vista Avenue, Miller Avenue, and Woodland Avenue. The City Council has decided to rename the street "Chambers Avenue" in honor of the Chambers family.

A street sign unveiling event will take place on July 20, 2020 at 10 a.m. to commemorate the renaming.

Here's a little more information about the Chambers:

Born in 1831 in Alabama, Samuel D. Chambers was separated from his mother as a boy and taken to Mississippi where he was enslaved until the end of the Civil War. He and his 13-years younger wife, Amanda Leggroan, also formerly enslaved in Mississippi, came to Utah in 1870 as Mormon converts. Teenaged son Peter, the progeny of Samuel and his deceased first wife, accompanied them, as did Amanda's brothers, Peter and Ned, and Ned's family.

After about six years in Salt Lake City, the Chambers family moved to a small farm in the Millcreek area. The small fruits the Chambers worked hard to cultivate, including currants, grapes, and gooseberries, won prizes at local fairs. The farm produced many necessities for the family as well, including chickens, eggs, peas, wheat, corn, cabbage, pork, butter, and molasses.

Peter lived with his parents, and later with his wife and children on the Chambers farm in one of two brick houses. Samuel and Amanda lived in the other. Peter and his family moved to Idaho in 1886, where he died in 1946.

Remaining in Millcreek, Samuel and Amanda had some 30 acres under cultivation by World War I. The Chambers farm produced a surplus that was sold to regular customers in the Mill Creek area and as far south as Holladay. Samuel and Amanda delivered fruit and milk, butter, eggs, and chickens by wagon. People also came to the farm to buy currants and other specialties grown by Chambers.

From the Facebook group Sistās in Zion: "The Chambers became active members of Utah's Black community. They never hesitated to set straight anyone who dared claim that slavery was 'not so bad.' It was illegal for enslaved African-Americans to be literate, but once in the Salt Lake Valley, Amanda taught herself and others how to read and write. Amanda was an astute business woman and entrepreneur, she drove her own wagon and Salt Lakers said, she'd ride off with a wagon full of goods and ride back with an apron full of money. Their 66th wedding anniversary was the talk of the town and a big Black community event, white folks didn't want to miss it either so they came making it an integrated party attended by General Authorities of the church. It even got a mention in the Deseret Newspaper. Samuel often thanked his Heavenly Father publicly for his wife, in one testimony meeting he said, 'I've a good woman, and that is a great blessing.'"

Amanda passed away in 1925 at age 81, while Samuel passed away in 1929, at age 98. They are both buried in Elysian Burial Gardens in Millcreek.

A MESSAGE FROM A VETERAN WHO LIVES IN MILLCREEK ABOUT FIREWORKS:

MILLCREEK. Fireworks are controversial in Utah, with clamor from all sides for more or for fewer restrictions. The Utah Legislature has set laws state-wide that cannot be altered by local municipalities, so your complaints are better directed to your state representatives if you want the laws to change. Nevertheless, we as a community can govern ourselves based on our humanity toward others.

Here's a message we received earlier this week from a Millcreek veteran about how fireworks can affect our local heroes and how we can help:

Just a brief note regarding fireworks often missed by citizens and community leaders. As I am sure you know, many veterans, particularly those suffering from PTSD, find the sounds of fireworks troubling. It can trigger flashbacks of moments that they struggle to put to rest.

I'd like to see a greater awareness of this as we try to balance celebration with the health and safety of our veterans who have been through the trauma of war. I am a Viet Nam veteran, and know from experience of what I speak.

We need to ensure we reach out to police and community organizations prior to firework displays who might need to be put on alert to simply keep an eye out for a veteran in distress and exercise what Utah people do best – show compassion and be ready to help. Neighbors and families can do the same. Knowing the Veterans Crisis hotline is a must (1-800-273-8255), but often it is just awareness needed.

Often it is as simple as trying to escape from the noise during the time of the fireworks – and enjoy them at a further distance where the noise is minimal or none at all. My own neighborhood ... sounded like a war zone for four nights running. I left my home and went for a ride up in East Canyon to escape.

We can do better. We can take better care of the needs of our veterans – simply by being aware that they may need extra attention and help during these celebratory times. Those who purchase fireworks for their back yards need to be mindful of veterans who live next door.
