IMPORTANT COVID-19 VACCINATION UPDATE

PUBLIC MEETINGS

City Council and CRA (Community Reinvestment Agency)

Wed., 3/22/21

Work Session 5PM

Regular Meeting 7PM

STATE OF UTAH. Governor Cox has announced that starting next Wednesday, March 24, any individual in Utah who is 16 years or older will be eligible for the COVID-19 vaccine. Salt Lake County will start making appointments this coming Monday, March 22, for all Utahns. The appointments will be for dates after April 4th.

CRA Meeting will convene after City Council adjournment

You can search for doses by your favorite provider at Coronavirus.Utah.gov or you can search by vaccine type and for doses near you at VaccineFinder.org. The state and local health departments, including the Salt Lake County Health Department, continue to work on making it easier for you to get an appointment.

Meetings will be virtual

For the time being, however, because each health department and provider receives different amounts of the vaccines, appointments may be hard to find. Please be both patient and persistent.

Right now, Utah is receiving 67,000 prime doses each week, but by the end of the month, we should be receiving more than 90,000 doses each week and we hope for increases from the federal government after that.

Here are a few important things the state asked us to note for you:

- If you've already had one dose of a two-dose vaccine, please get the second dose at the same place where you got your first dose. The provider who gave you your first dose reserved a second dose for you. If you don't return to the same place, we'll end up with unused doses or not enough second doses for people when they need it at some locations.
- Vaccines are free and you don't have to have health insurance to get vaccinated.
- You don't have to be a U.S. citizen or resident to get the vaccine.

- Don't forget that Utah's mask mandate is still in effect until April 10. However, masks can still be required for gatherings of 50 or more people. Private businesses can also still require masks after this date. And the school mask mandate won't go away until at least July. Please be kind to your neighbors and the businesses you frequent about the choices they make about masks.

More than one million doses of the vaccine have been administered in our state, and our 7-day rolling average for cases is the lowest it has been since September 13. That was the last time we were under 500 cases per day. Almost the entire population of Utah now lives in moderate or low transmission counties. Thanks for doing your part.

STATE OF EMERGENCY DECLARED DUE TO DROUGHT CONDITIONS

STATE OF UTAH. Governor Cox has issued an Executive Order declaring a state of emergency due to drought conditions. 100% of Utah is in drought, which is extremely concerning for this time of year. This winter's snowpack

(about 70% of average) hasn't provided enough to offset the record dry conditions we saw last summer and fall. For snowpack to reach average, Utah's mountains would need to receive the remaining 30% before it starts to melt significantly, typically the first week in April. There is around a 10% chance of this occurring.

To make matters worse, current soil moisture is at an all-time low. Dry soils reduce the effectiveness of any precipitation we receive because the ground will soak it up first and reduce the runoff that typically fills reservoirs, lakes and streams.

That means we need to be more mindful of our water use because we live in one of the driest states in the country. Finding ways to reduce water use is imperative as we move into the summer months. Being waterwise helps keep reservoir levels up, ensuring water is available for fire suppression, wildlife and recreation.

The last time conditions warranted a drought declaration was when former Gov. Gary Herbert issued an executive order on Oct. 15, 2018. At that time, 99% of the state was in a moderate drought, with more than 76% of Utah experiencing at least severe drought conditions.

MAGNA EARTHQUAKE ANNIVERSARY

SALT LAKE COUNTY. Yesterday marked the one-year anniversary of the Magna earthquake, a 5.7 event that occurred on March 18, 2020 with an epicenter north of Magna, Utah.

Aftershocks related to the 5.7 event last year have continued ever since, with 2,589 earthquakes being recorded by the University of Utah Seismograph Stations through today.

Fortunately, there were no major injuries from the Magna earthquake but the damage to buildings totaled over $2 million throughout the Salt Lake Valley, mainly in Magna running north.

Prior to the Magna earthquake, the exact location of the Wasatch fault was unknown but multiple research papers prepared with information gathered since the quake conclude that the fault likely has a gentler dip than previously thought. That puts the fault closer to the surface. New models indicate that a future earthquake along the Salt Lake City segment of the Wasatch Fault would likely cause greater ground shaking than previously estimated.

Although Millcreek was spared major damage from the quake, those of us who were startled awake that scary morning a year ago should have used it as a call to action. The new models prepared since then are a renewed call. We live in earthquake country and relatively small quakes or the big one will occur in the future; we just don't know when.

A town hall was presented by BeReadyUtah last night with information from experts on how your family should prepare. If you missed it, click here.

There are simple things you should be doing now:

- Move or secure things that could fall on you
- Store emergency supplies such as a portable radio and a flashlight
- Store food and water (don't forget to have enough for family pets)
- Store extra supplies of medicines
- Keep a pair of shoes next to your bed
- Know the best way to exit your building
- Install fire alarms and fire extinguishers

The COVID vaccine is currently in the early stages of distribution, and everyone will eventually have the chance to get vaccinated.

Will the COVID vaccine hurt? What are the side effects?

The vaccine is delivered as an injection in the arm, like other typical vaccines. You may experience some pain and swelling in your arm, a mild fever and fatigue, aches, chills, or headache for a day or two.

These reactions are a sign that your immune system is revving up and doing what it's supposed to do.

Contact your doctor or healthcare provider if the redness or tenderness where you got the shot increases after 24 hours, your side effects are worrying you, or do not seem to be going away after a few days.

For more information about the COVID vaccine, visit SaltLakeHealth.org.
